

My name is Sumaiya, I am in 9c.

The reasons i feel i should be deputy head is, im able to be a good role model to the rest of the students at csg, as well as that i have qualities that supports the reputation of the school as well making my peers feel comfortable enough to talk to me and to allow me to help them make school as comfortable as possible. I would try my hardest to make sure that younger members of our school were able to enjoy themselves in an environment where they can flourish. It would be an honor to call myself year 10 deputy and represent myself as a key role in our school community. My most useful quality is my stubbornness and unwillingness to quit. I am capable of handling many responsibilities, and am willing to work very hard to improve our school. I will make sure that every view, every idea will be heard, because I think that is a very important thing to have, especially in a school with so many different cultures and ethnicities. I excel at making good and strong relationships, as I've already made so many in this very school with teachers and my classmates. I am comfortable speaking with all sorts of people of any age, child or adult, and am not afraid to voice my opinion even when that may not be popular or the expected. Being deputy would mean I could go the extra mile for others; something I envisage in the role would be to set up a drop in advice 'clinic' for younger students who perhaps feel they could not approach a member of staff; I hope to offer guidance and support, as I strongly believe that a problem shared is a problem halved. Thank you for taking your time to read this.
